

Let's Chalk it Up!

There was a time that chalk was just for chalkboards and sidewalks. Now inexpensive chalk and chalk paints are available, and you can use them creatively in many different art endeavours. The following ideas will help you use chalk in ways you may not have considered before.

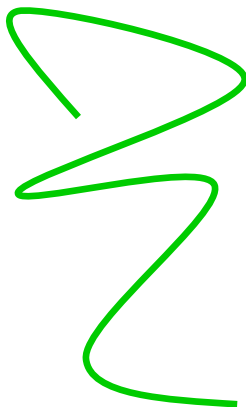

Negative chalk drawing; by taping down a shape and chalking over the shape, creating an aura when you lift the shape.

Penguin pictures using chalk paints. Chalk paints have bolder colours and show up well on black paper.

In warmer weather the surface of your trampoline makes a great area to “chalk it up”. Just wash off when finished and you’re ready to start again.

Wet chalk will give your pictures bolder colours and may be easier for little hands to make a mark.
